Your circular letter referring Paul Krone is before me, and while I do not make any pretensions of being an art critic, am prompted to say in regard thereto. No one ever saw a man approach his horse ~~from~~ on the right to either adjust his saddle or to mount, I doubt if the designer was a horseman, I was raised on a farm, and rode a horse bareback at 8, and have been at it ever since more or less. If the model showed the Horn Bradell to the left Paul there would be a proper position to mount. I can't say that I drink all.

Yours very truly

W. Mayland Potter

Dear Mr. Potter:

Your letter is at hand, and it is a demonstration of the many points of view which one must keep in mind when considering a coin or medal design. I think the artist had in mind not so much the idea of Paul Revere trying to mount as awaiting the signal which was to be displayed in the Church spire shown in the distance. From the point of view of the design having his figure behind the horse, would have made it a medal of the horse rather than the rider.

Our reproduction does not do full justice to the medal itself, as you may realize when you see a specimen.

Very truly yours,

Secretary

Dear Sir:

Your notation on the bill for 1927 dues to the effect that you had sent a check for this under date of January 15th is at hand. We have carefully gone over our records without being able to find that your check has been received. May I ask you to allow the matter to rest until such time as your return checks come into your hands? And if you will then check up your stubs, you will be able to show whether or not we agree in thinking that it reached us.

Cordially yours,

Secretary

Dear Sir:

Your check showing payment for 1927 dues was received this morning and with its aid, it has been possible to check up and find that we did have a record of it never having reached our hands after all.

I am very sorry for the occurrence and trust you will pardon the error. We shall endeavor to see that it doesn't happen again.

Very cordially yours,

Secretary

Sam P. Noe.

my dear Sir

I want to say "Thank you" for the kindly Expression noted in your letter of Oct 14th. I had not lost sight of the matter mentioned, nor had I forgot. Very heavy demands upon my resources for benefit of my son, who is helpless, so far as work is concerned brought on by the damnable German War is the reason for seeming neglect. Am going to see daylight again and enclose OK to cover years 1929-30.

Very truly yours

Dear Mr. Potter:

Your letter of the 18th enclosing cheque, is at hand; thank you very much indeed. I am glad to learn that your financial condition (in contrast to that of some individuals known to me) is improving. If we can help you numismatically in any way please feel that we shall be glad to have you call upon us. And if you come to New York in the near future, the invitation to call upon us in any other way still holds good.

Very sincerely yours,

Secretary.
